Clinics. At its clinic facilities, certain of the Cetero entities conduct procedures on subjects/patients for clinical research. As a result of these procedures, certain of the Cetero entities generate medical waste. Cetero manages such waste in accordance with applicable rules and, if allowed to continue to do so, do not foresee such waste management as posing a threat. Cetero's clinics also have back up power supplied by natural gas or diesel-fueled generators. Where diesel fuel is stored at the clinic locations in aboveground storage tanks, Cetero believes the storage tanks are in compliance with all applicable regulatory standards. At the Fargo facility, Cetero operates a small laboratory in addition to the clinical operations. These laboratory operations generate a small amount of biomedical and hazardous waste, which certain of the Cetero entities manage in accordance with applicable rules. Cetero's Fargo Clinic holds hazardous waste generator identification number NDR000007195.

Laboratory. Cetero's Houston Lab tests blood samples to determine the amount of drug(s) in those samples. In connection with this analysis, Cetero generates organic solvent and biohazardous waste. Cetero manages this waste in a manner that complies with all applicable laws and regulations. The Lab uses two licensed contractors for the disposal of waste: biohazard waste is disposed of by Stericycle (Generator Identification # 2096175-001), and chemical and oil waste is disposed of by SET Environmental (Generator Identification # TXCESQG).
