NIH TACT Study / Chelation Therapy

No Cost Chelation Therapy Study

Participants Needed

Integrated Healing Arts has been chosen as a research site for the Trial to Assess Chelation Therapy (TACT), a 5-year, $30 million study sponsored by the National Institutes of Health to assess the safety and effectiveness of chelation therapy in treating coronary artery disease.

Chelation therapy is often used as an alternative therapy in the treatment of coronary artery disease, with close to 1 million infusions occurring each year in the US. Still, it remains controversial, as its effectiveness in treating coronary disease has not been satisfactorily tested clinically, though anecdotal evidence for its efficacy is abundant.

Under the auspices of the NIH and in conjunction with the Mount Sinai Medical Center in Miami Beach, Florida, Integrated Healing Arts is serving as one of more than 100 TACT test sites across the country. Patients are now being recruited to participate in the randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled study, the most comprehensive study of chelation therapy to date.

You may qualify for participation in TACT!

To be considered for TACT, patients must be 50 years of age or older, have had a heart attack, and have had no chelation therapy treatment within the last 5 years. Certain health and lifestyle conditions, including but not limited to cigarette smoking, possibility of childbearing, and diagnosis of cancer may exclude a patient from eligibility to participate in this study.

Those who join the study will be part of a nationwide effort to help the medical community find new and effective treatments for heart disease. In addition, their health will be closely monitored while they are enrolled in the study.

- No Cost for treatment
- No Cost for multivitamins and minerals for the duration of the study

TACT is Sponsored by:

The National Institutes of Health (NIH)
The National Heart, Lung & Blood Institute
The National Center for Complimentary and
